DETAILED ACTION

1. This communication is responsive to preliminary amendment 3/12/04. Claims 1-24 are currently pending in this Reissue application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Srinivasan P.N. 6,177,797.

Srinivasan discloses a head coil element for MRI. Applicant's attention is directed to Fig.3 and corresponding description. The head coil element consists of three coils, two quadrature volume coils and a quadrature surface coil. The coils can be operatively combined by a coupling circuit (see e.g. claim 10) to perform selective imaging in selective modes. In addition to these operating modes, the signals from the coils may be combined before or after they reach the amplifier or receiver. This implies two modes of operation of the coupling circuit or coil interface. One, in which the coil outputs are coupled to an equal number of receivers and the other, where the coil outputs are coupled to a lesser number of receivers. See lines 26 and 27 of col. 13.
